Summary Paragraph

The property commonly known as 401 N. Hoback Street (previously 900 8th Avenue/403 N. Hoback) is located in an historic residential neighborhood located east of Rodney Street and Helena's downtown. It occupies a rectangular lot on the northeast corner of the intersection of 8th Avenue and N. Hoback Street. A gravel alley borders the north side of the parcel. The property contains two separately-constructed wood-frame buildings, a commercial store building and a residence, that were moved onto the site and attached to form a single building, as well as a detached carriage-house-cum-garage. The store-residence is situated in the south portion of the lot, abutting both the south and west property lines, while the carriage-house/garage abuts the north property line and the alley. A yard, planted to grass, lies between the two buildings and runs along the east side of the store/residence. A wood privacy fence encloses the yard. City sidewalk bounds the parcel on its south (8th Avenue) and west (N. Hoback St.) sides. A concrete walkway runs northward from the rear entrance of the residence to a concrete parking pad, which extends from N. Hoback Street to the west wall of the garage. A second, shorter concrete walkway runs westward from the rear of the residence to the city sidewalk along N. Hoback Street. A deck, built of wood, extends off the northeast corner of the residence building. A variety of trees grows on the property, and lilacs line the west edge of the backyard. The Dorsey Grocery and Residence retains essential integrity of design, setting, feeling, and association. Though the buildings were moved onto the site, the move occurred at the behest of the Dorsey family when they purchased the vacant property; the buildings conjoined to serve as their grocery and residence. Their installation at the site marks the beginning of the property's association with the Dorseys and the beginning of its historic significance. The grocery/residence thus retains integrity of location where it attained historic significance. Although the cladding on the building has been changed (compromising integrity of materials) and the corners of the false front were sawn off after they rotted, the exterior remains largely intact and easily conveys its essential historic character and significance. Extant interior plans and details support the property's integrity, as does its enduring historic function as a combined commercial-residential property.

As noted in the "African-American Heritage Places in Helena, MT" Multiple Properties Documentation form, extant African American historical properties in Helena are rare. This fact is important to keep in mind when evaluating a property's eligibility for registration in the NRHP. It is especially important to take it into account when evaluating integrity. For rare resources like the property types associated with Helena's African-American history, physical characteristics must be sufficiently intact to convey the property's historic associations, but the seven specific aspects of integrity—location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association—should be assessed in the context of other surviving resources related to the history Helena's black community. Few of these rare historic resources are unmodified. In this context, the Dorsey Grocery and Residence meets the registration requirements set forth in the "African-American Heritage Places in Helena, MT" Multiple Properties Documentation form.

Narrative Description

Two attached wood-frame buildings—a store and a dwelling—comprise the historic main building on the property. Reportedly moved onto the lot in 1904, owners joined them to form a single building. The one-story grocery component faces south onto 8th Avenue (its original address was 900 8th Avenue) while the two-story residence attached to its rear (north wall) faces west onto North Hoback Street (its original address was 403 N. Hoback Street). The entire building purportedly lacks a formal foundation, resting instead on piled stones parged with concrete, its underside covered with lye to keep out insects. Aluminum siding clads the building's walls and overlays the original wood siding on three sides (a second-generation siding, asbestos, was removed when the metal siding was installed in the late 1970s. The original siding on the west side of the building was removed when the asbestos was installed and is no longer extant beneath the metal). Asphalt composition shingles clad the roof. Unless otherwise noted, all windows in the building are original and have wood frames.

Grocery

The south-facing grocery component stands as a one-story Western Commercial-style building with a north-south oriented rectangular footprint. It has a front-gable roof that originally featured a false front. The corners of the false-front deteriorated over time and, by 1975, were sawn off (leaving the triangular gable). Faux-brick plastic panels (in a red, running bond brick design) veneer the bottom quarters of the west and south walls.

The façade (south wall) of the grocery component is a relatively intact commercial storefront.¹ It features a central, recessed entry, with wood floor, flanked to either side by storefront display windows. Each of the window openings contains eight fixed lights beneath four-light full-width transoms. Original double doors fill the entry, each of which has two large lights over a wood panel. Angled side lights in the same glazed-and-paneled pattern flank the doors. The entry is accessed by a concrete step.

The north end of the west wall of the grocery component contains the original rear entry, which accessed the storeroom (and later accessed Clarkson's photography studio at 401 N. Hoback). The entry consists of a modern one-light metal door beneath an original wood-frame one-light transom. It is accessed by concrete steps and a scored concrete parking pad, originally used for deliveries. Immediately south of the door is a single window opening, filled with a single fixed sash.

The north end of the east wall of the grocery component contains a small window opening filled with a fixed, one-light sash situated high in the wall that lit the original storeroom. Immediately to the north are paired units on the ground floor; these partially overlap into the residence.

Residence

The two-story residence has a cross-gabled roof and an irregular footprint with an integral front (west) porch and a one-story enclosed side porch on its north wall. Both porches have shed roofs. A square wood post, with decorative brackets that may be original, supports the northeast corner of the front porch roof, and the same faux-brick panels that clad the lower portions of the grocery's west and south walls cover the porch's knee wall. The enclosed porch off the north wall side has exposed rafter ends. On the primary residence component both original interior brick chimneys are extant, one at the edge of the south roof slope and the other, which served the kitchen, at edge of the east roof slope. Unless otherwise noted, the windows in the residence component are original, wood-frame, one-over-one double-hung sashes with decorative wood shutters.

The primary entrance is located in the north wall of a small enclosed entry contained beneath the south end of the porch's shed roof. It is filled with a metal security door paired with the original one-light glazed-and-paneled door beneath an original one-light transom. Also beneath the porch roof is a window opening filled with a single window located in the west wall. Other window openings in the west wall include a single small fixed light centered in the enclosed entry, and large paired windows centered in the front-gable bay's first story. A window opening filled with a nine-light fixed-sash window occurs in the west wall of the enclosed one-story north wall porch. Two window openings punctuate the west wall's second story: one set off-center to the north in the side-gable bay, and another centered in the front-gable bay.

The aforementioned enclosed side porch covers the west side of the first story of the residence's north wall. The porch has a window opening on the east side of its north wall that was originally filled with three six-light sashes; one, however, has been replaced with a one-over-one double-hung sash. The east wall of the enclosed porch contains a window opening at its north edge filled with a nine-light sash. South of the window, the porch's east wall contains an entry consisting of a metal security door that fronts a solid modern door.

East of the enclosed porch, the residence's north wall's first story contains an opening filled with a single window, and another centered in the second story gable end.

The east wall of the north-projecting gable contains a window opening, with a single fixed light, set off-center to the south in the first story, and another original window, a two-over-two double-hung in the second story. The east wall of the east-facing gable bay features additional window openings that include the previously mentioned paired ground story windows that overlap between the grocery and residence. Other windows include a small opening filled with a single fixed light immediately north of the paired units in the ground floor, and two openings in the second story, each containing a single window.

Grocery and Residence Interiors

In both the grocery and the residence, the interior plan and numerous details remain intact.

The grocery's interior consists of a single large room with original wood floors. On either side of the entry, the original deep built-in display shelves (situated behind the storefront windows so items can be seen from the street) remain intact. The original high ceilings remain, and the location of original light fixtures is identifiable, as is the location of the original stovepipe. Original walls are extant, and have not been covered or re-painted: the silhouette of original grocery shelving is visible on the east wall. (See appended historic interior photo for comparison).

The interior of the residence consists of six main rooms, three on each floor, around a central hallway-stairwell that runs east-west. Upon entry from the front door (on the north wall at the south end of the west-side front porch), one stands in an entry hall that opens onto the parlor, with adjoining dining room (which together form the south portion of the first floor), with the staircase and first-floor hallway to one's left. At the east end of the hallway are doors to the dining room (south side) and large kitchen (north side) with original cabinetry. The kitchen connects to an enclosed side porch through a doorway in its north wall, and a door to the dining room in its south wall. Upstairs, the landing opens to three doors and a hallway that runs west, with a door at its west end. The bathroom is located at the top of the stairs, east of the landing. Bedrooms are located in the southeast and southwest corners and the north portion of the second floor. Walls and floors have been updated throughout. Original woodwork includes wide baseboards, window trim and door casing (with bullseyes and plinth blocks), and turned balusters.

Garage (a.k.a. Carriage House)

A detached wood-frame garage, originally a carriage house, occupies the north end of the property, along the alley. It has a rectangular footprint composed of a north-south oriented, 1 and one-half story gabled component (which contains a hayloft and horse stalls) on its east end, and a shed-roof one-story component on its west end. Both components existed by 1930 (a later west-end addition was subsequently removed). Asphalt composition shingles cover roof surfaces, and a variety of wood siding, including board-and-batten, droplap, vertical tongue-ingroove, and T-1-11 plywood panels, clads the exterior walls. No foundation underlies the building.

The west wall of the garage contains a garage-door opening filled with an overhead wood multi-panel garage door accessed by a concrete parking pad. The north wall of the one-story component is featureless, while the north wall of the taller gabled component contains a centered hayloft door, made of board-and-batten, and on the first floor, a window opening infilled with boards. The east wall of the garage lacks fenestration. The south wall of the gabled component contains a boarded-over two-light Dutch, or stable, door. The south wall of the one-story component contains a window opening that contains two six-light fixed-sash windows.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

Constructed in 1904 and closed in 1932, the Dorsey Grocery and Residence is locally significant as a residential and commercial property associated with the history of African-American people in Helena, Montana.² Established by one of Helena's most prominent black families—the Walter and Almira Dorseys—the residence and store housed several generations of extended Dorsey kin while the store was the most visible and substantial black-owned business in town. As such, it not only served African-American and other customers but also functioned as a focal point of the local black community, an exemplar of black achievement and an independent space owned by, and supportive of, African-American residents. The Dorsey Grocery and Residence thus represents two of the three historic contexts documented in the African-American Heritage Places in Helena, MT, Multiple Property Document, ie. “The Heyday of Helena’s African-American Community, ca. 1877-1910,” and “Decline and Endurance of Helena’s African-American Community, ca. 1910-1970.” Eligible for listing under National Register of Historic Places Criterion A, the Dorsey Grocery and Residence was significantly associated with Helena’s African-American community for over 25 years. The property’s period of significance thus extends from its initial construction in 1904 through 1932, when Almira Dorsey sold the property and it passed out of African-American ownership and operation.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

Around 1866, in Sandy Spring, Maryland, Caroline Dorsey (nee Holland) gave birth to her third son, Walter R. Dorsey. Walter joined older brothers William (four) and Augustus (six). What happened to the boys’ father Elijah is unknown, but by 1872 Caroline had remarried, to farmer Horice Mitchell. Over the next seven years Horice and Caroline had six more children, and 1880 found the African-American Mitchell-Dorsey family in Berrys, Montgomery County, Maryland. Not long thereafter, at least two of the Dorsey boys headed west. By 1891, middle son William Dorsey had made it to Marysville, Montana, where he worked as a helper at the Montana Co. and boarded at the Bon Ton Hotel. That year, his younger brother Walter was also in Montana. He could be found not too far away, in the booming mining city, and state capital, of Helena: there, on the last day of 1891, Walter R. Dorsey, 26, married Almira E. Kelley, 29.³

Almira was from Weston, Missouri, the oldest, and only daughter, of Richard and Anna Estes Kelley’s five children. Just 11 when her daughter was born, Almira’s mother Anna was widowed around the time she had her fifth child, ca. 1878. Almira was by then 17, and had likely spent much of her young life working with her mother to help take care of the family. After their marriage, Almira and Walter, who may have known each other before arriving in Montana (one source suggests Walter came to Helena from Missouri), settled at 21 S. Jackson and soon started a family of their own. Daughter Annie A. was born in 1892, and two years later daughter Carolyn E. (Carrie) followed. Other relatives joined the growing family in Helena. In 1892, William Dorsey lived next door at 17 S. Jackson while he worked as porter at the Montana Club. By 1894, Annie Kelley, Almira's Missouri-born mother, lived with the Dorseys.⁴

In these early years, Walter worked a variety of jobs to support his family. In 1892, Walter ran a restaurant at 104 Broadway. Two years later he was at the Montana Club, where he worked as a steward and a waiter. He remained at the Montana Club in 1895 (during which time the family lived at 122 Grand), but by 1896 Walter and Almira opened a grocery store at 114 N. Rodney. They moved their family—including Almira's mother Annie—onto the premises and established an enduring family-owned business: the Dorseys operated a grocery in Helena for the next 35 years.⁵

The first Dorsey grocery location proved fleeting, as 1898 brought change to both the family and the business. That year, their daughter Annie died, and Walter and Almira buried her at Forestvale Cemetery (NR Reference #90000145).⁶ At the same time, they welcomed a new baby, daughter Lena M., and after successfully establishing their business on Helena's booming east side, they moved both their residence and their grocery from Rodney Street to an existing combination grocery/residence that they rented at 843 8th Avenue (24LC2446).⁷ For the next five years the Dorseys, along with Annie Kelley, ran their grocery and lived at 843 8th Ave., providing staples and other goods to the growing east side neighborhood. During that time Walter sometimes took additional work to make ends meet (1900 found him working as a clerk at the Union Mercantile Co.) but the Dorsey family, and grocery, persevered.⁸ In 1901, at the age of 39, Almira bore a fourth and final daughter, Emma O.⁹

With their growing family living in the midst of an expanding neighborhood, the future must have seemed promising, and the Dorseys began to explore the possibility of buying their own place. They stayed in the neighborhood where they had an established clientele: in the spring of 1904, they purchased the vacant lot on the northeast corner of the nearest intersection, North Hoback Street and 8th Avenue, which they could see—a literal stone's throw away—from their front porch. First platted in 1883 as part of the Bassett Addition, the lot remained undeveloped through a series of previous owners, including Isaac Cutler (1883-1887), Charles Senior (1887-1891), Charles K. Anderson (1891-1900), and Jay K. Sheffy (1900-1903). It wound up in the hands of the Pratt & Heath Company in December 1903, from whom the Dorseys purchased it about three months later.¹⁰ (Figure 1)

The Dorseys reportedly moved a store building and a house onto the property almost immediately, joining the two buildings into a single entity with two facades: the store faced south to 8th Avenue while the home faced west toward North Hoback Street. Longtime neighborhood resident, and current owner Bob Clarkson, believes that the buildings may have come from the small town of Canton when that Missouri River settlement was flooded after the construction of the Canyon Ferry dam; however, it was the 1954 dam, not the dam constructed in 1898, that flooded Canton. Regardless, physical evidence does suggest that the buildings were moved from elsewhere onto the site—no permanent foundation underlies them but rather both structures sit on piled stones . . . they dug out a trench for the areas with plumbing on the east side and also a large space was excavated under the now studio for the floor heater in the house. That area was used as a root cellar for produce while the store was open. Except the root cellar storage, the entire area underneath the buildings is covered with a thick layer of white lye to keep out insects and vermin.¹¹

It thus appears the buildings were set on the property already assembled and then joined. Other evidence of this is that the sawn ends of the original store-roof rafters are visible in the attic of the house.

With a store/dwelling in place, the Dorseys set about moving their business and home to their new property. By 1905, city directories listed the Dorsey Grocery at 900 8th Avenue, where the business sold “Groceries, Provisions, Salt Meats, Canned Goods, Fruits, Vegetables, Confectionary, Tin and Granite Ware.” The following year, the Dorsey Grocery boasted a telephone, and could be reached by dialing number 236-B.¹² The attached three-bedroom residence, with large kitchen and formal parlor and dining room adorned with embossed fleur de lis wallpaper, provided a spacious and elegant residence for the grocery’s proud owners.

The substantial and successful grocery and residence reflected, and deepened, the Dorsey family’s prominence in Helena’s African-American community. Walter Dorsey had by then been a noteworthy personage for some time—the local black newspaper published in 1894, the Colored Citizen, reported on his activities in its pages—and by 1906 he stood as a pillar of the close-knit black community. In addition to being perhaps the most visible and prosperous black business owner and operating a business that was itself a valued community institution, Walter played a variety of formal and informal leadership roles. In a 1970s interview with historian Quintard Taylor, longtime community members Mr. Ad E. and Elenorah (Anderson) Banks

Lot 16 was still vacant when the Sanborn Fire Insurance Company mapped it in 1892, and the current property owner has always believed that the Dorseys moved the buildings onto the property. It is possible that the buildings were extant by the time the Dorseys purchased Lot 16.

remembered the Dorseys as “the most prominent people” among Helena’s African-American population.¹³

The Dorseys were especially active in the St. James African Methodist Episcopal Church, located three blocks to the south of their grocery on the southwest corner of Hoback and 5th Avenue (24LC2430). When the church gave a reception to welcome the Reverend and Mrs. Osborne in October 1906, Walter served as the event’s Master of Ceremonies, and he was also one of the leaders of the St. James Literary Society.¹⁴ At that time, under the leadership of Walter Dorsey as well as the new Reverend (W. T. Osborne), Mrs. Eugene Baker, and Joseph Clark, the Literary Society “boast[ed] over 100 participants at its weekly meetings. The society provided black Helenans with a forum for discussion of community issues, an audience for performing artists, and an opportunity for local poets, playwrights, and essayists to present their work.” Prominent among Society activities were formal debates (followed by “furious discussions”) on such topics as “Resolved, that the Negroes of the South enjoy more prosperity than in any other section of the U.S.” or “Resolved, that slavery was a benefit to the Negro race”; or “Resolved, that woman suffrage is detrimental to the welfare of the nation.”¹⁵

In addition to his business skills and religious and intellectual pursuits, Walter Dorsey was an accomplished musician. He was a noted member of Helena’s “local all-black band,” and put his musical talents to use in support of other central institutions in the black community. In May, 1907, when residents held a benefit concert for the African-American newspaper, the Plaindealer, at Electric Hall, Dorsey starred as “premier vocalist and musical director” of the grand event.¹⁶ The Plaindealer hailed his assistance in the fundraiser, as it did his other community endeavors. The previous January the paper reported his presence—along with Nathaniel Ford, B.F. Hooper, H. Baker, Eugene Clark, and many unnamed others—at a banquet of one of Helena’s two “colored” Masonic lodges.¹⁷ A prominent member of the Masonic orders, Dorsey was also active with the local black Odd Fellows Lodge. He played a leadership role in area Republican Party activities as well, serving as convention delegate on at least one occasion.¹⁸

The Dorseys also served as community leaders in less formal ways. The parties they hosted—like the summer 1906 group outing to the Missouri River Dam—were among the notable social events of the season and made the pages of the Plaindealer.¹⁹ Meanwhile, they stepped in to assist other community members in less enjoyable affairs. In December of 1906, Mrs. James Ingram, who lived on the next block at 311 N. Hoback, shot and wounded her husband, apparently in self-defense during a domestic violence altercation. When she fled to the police station “to have him arrested for assault,” the authorities arrested her instead, and her bond was set at a significant sum—$750. But she was soon released: B.F. Hooper and Walter Dorsey arrived and acted “as her bondsmen.”²⁰

With their business and personal lives apparently flourishing in 1907, the Dorseys must have looked forward to marking their 16th wedding anniversary on December 31st. Perhaps they planned one of their famed parties, or maybe they looked forward to a calm, cozy New Year’s night spent in their handsome North Hoback home. Whatever their hopes for that day, they were surely shattered: on the last day of 1907, Walter Dorsey died. Just 41 years old, Dorsey succumbed to sickness variously reported as pneumonia or “la grippe” (ie. influenza).²¹ His death made front page news in the African-American community, and both the Plaindealer and Helena’s main daily paper, the Independent Record, reported on the “The Last Sad Rites” of W. R. Dorsey.²²

Almira Dorsey, 45, must have been devastated by her husband’s sudden death, but she had little choice but to soldier on. She had a business to run and a family to support. Moreover, when Walter died “his children [were also] ill with la grippe”: Carrie (13), Lena (9), and Emma (6) needed their mother’s care.²³ Saddled with these multiple burdens, Almira weathered her early widowhood with the help of her extended family. In February 1908, Walter’s older brother Augustus G. Dorsey arrived to “assist Mrs. Dorsey in conducting the business left by her husband,” bringing with him his 12-year-old son Bernice A. Dorsey. Almira’s mother Annie also remained with her, traveling temporarily to Weston, Missouri in 1909 and bringing another relative, Floyd Kelly, back to Helena when she returned. Although Anna Kelley was widowed long before he was born, census takers enumerated Floyd as Almira’s much younger brother in 1910 when, at the age of 17, he was living at the Dorsey Grocery property on 8th and Hoback.²⁴

With her family by her side, Almira Dorsey continued the successful grocery business tradition she’d begun with her husband. She would own, occupy, and operate the property for another 25 years (see appended photo). During that time, she ran the grocery and shared the dwelling—and sometimes the store work—with a shifting array of relatives. In 1910, census takers enumerated a total of eight people at 900 8th Avenue, including Almira and her daughters and mother, Annie Kelley, as well as Floyd Kelley and Augustus and Bernice Dorsey. That year, Floyd and Augustus, at least, both worked with Almira in the store, which enjoyed pride of place in the Plaindealer’s May list of the “many business enterprises in Helena conducted by colored people.” According to the newspaper, first “among them should be mentioned a very large grocery store, operated by Mrs. R.C. Dorsey [sic].” Dorsey’s grocery served as the anchor of Helena’s black business sector, which that year also included “Miles York Express line & barbershop, J.E.W. Clark's hair dressing parlors, A.J. Walton's second hand store & the Broadway Suitatorium conducted by Harry Salsburg" and his wife Ada (Site 24LC2429).²⁵

In the wake of Walter's death, the Dorseys managed to maintain their active role in the African-American community more broadly. Like his late brother, Augustus Dorsey became a leader in community affairs. In 1911, he was among "a delegation of colored men from this state" appointed by Governor Edwin Norris, a Democrat, "to attend the National [Negro] Educational convention" to be held that year in Denver, joining longstanding local black luminaries like "Nathaniel Ford, Arthur Palmer, B.F. Hooper, J.E.W. Clark . . . G.W. Alexander, H.J. Baker, Miles York, [and] Rev. B.R. Guy" as well as African-American men from other Montana cities. Bernice Dorsey, meanwhile, joined up with the son of famed black Helena mine developer, and one-time millionaire, H. Porter Grove, and together the young men struck out "to make it for themselves." The Plaindealer reported the departure of Bernice and Sirlas Grove in August 1911, noting that "the last heard of them, they had got as far as Bozeman."²⁶ Several years later, the Kansas City Sun reported on Dorsey family members in its regular Helena news column, noting that Emma Dorsey had attended "a delightful surprise party" in honor of Milton Wilson's 16th birthday and Augustus G. Dorsey had been at a "delightful luncheon" given by "Mrs. Wm. Mason of Cannon Street."²⁷ Augustus, who frequently made the pages of the Kansas City Sun in this period, was at the time something of a newlywed: on a June day in 1915, at the age of 55, he married 42 year-old widow Carrie J. Walker (b. Bowling Green, Kentucky).²⁸ The network of Dorsey kin in Helena expanded accordingly.

In subsequent years, as it shifted with life events, the extended Dorsey family activities continued to center around the grocery and home on the corner of 8th and Hoback. In 1918, city directories showed Almira's mother Mrs. Anna Kelly at 834 8th Avenue, where she lived with Catherine A. Kelly, a stenographer who was probably a relative.²⁹ The following year, Walter and Almira's third daughter, Lena, married Elihu J. Reid, 28, in Fergus County, Montana.³⁰ Lena had been living at her parents' house, going to school and helping at the grocery or working as a "maid," but after her marriage she moved with her husband to Lewistown, where he was a barber. Sixteen-year-old Emma O. remained at home with her mother in 1920, working in the grocery and as a maid at the Marlow Theatre, but she likely married and moved out soon thereafter: in 1922, when eldest surviving daughter Carrie Dorsey married Leroy Martin in Silver Bow County, one of her witnesses was Emma Dorsey Phelps.³¹

Walter Dorsey's brother Augustus eventually took work outside of the grocery—in 1920 he was a porter at Whitman's, and in 1922 a wiper at the Northern Pacific shops—but he stayed close by. He and his wife Carrie J., who worked as a “charwoman” (ie. cleaning lady), lived briefly at 541 5th Avenue, next door to Ad E. Banks, before moving to 1002 E. Broadway, where they remained for years. Augustus' son Bernice Dorsey was less settled, but stayed in the region, moving repeatedly between Helena and nearby cities. He married Sophonia Brown (b. Great Falls, daughter of Priscilla Dennison Brown) in 1922 in Anaconda, worked in Butte and Anaconda in subsequent years, and in 1931 could be found working as a porter at Helena's Harvey Hotel and living with his dad and stepmother at 1002 E. Broadway.³²

Almira Dorsey was by then about 69 years old, and she'd been running a large grocery, as a widowed mother and a black businesswoman in a realm dominated by white males, for 35 years. In 1932, as the Great Depression set in, Almira sold her property, home and business, and moved to Los Angeles. There, she joined daughter Lena, who by 1930 had divorced and moved to L.A.: that year, Lena lived with Althea Mitchell, whom census enumerators identified as her sister but who was likely a cousin, daughter of one of her Maryland-born father's Mitchell half-siblings. Almira died in L.A. several years later.³³

The Gloege Grocery Era

By the time Almira sold the store and residence on the corner of 8th and Hoback, the lot contained the grocery with attached dwelling as well as several outbuildings, including a carriage house that had been converted to a garage (situated at the north end of the lot, along the alley), and a shed that sat off the northeast corner of the house along the east property line.³⁴ The grocery business that occupied the store portion of the building was well established, and the house in the rear was ample and attractive. Soon, another family saw the property's appeal and bought it with the intent of carrying on its grocery tradition. In 1935, Caroline D. Gloege acquired it from Schroeder Bros. Corp.³⁵ Like the Dorseys before them, the Gloege family became resident grocers. They immediately undertook some repairs to the property, re-shingling the roof and re-building the back porch as well as other unspecified improvements (including, at some point, an addition to the west end of the west component of the garage), and then settled in.³⁶

Like Almira before her, Caroline was soon thereafter widowed. Husband Henry Gloege died in August 1941, at the age of 70.³⁷ Led by son Louis and his wife Margaret M., the Gloege family continued living in the 403 N. Hoback dwelling portion of the building, and they ran the 900 8th Avenue grocery store for some thirty years.³⁸ In the 1950s, Richard Richter briefly became a partner in the business, and the Gloege and Richter Grocery operated for several years before it reverted, by 1956, to the Gloege Grocery once again. By that time, large “national chain stores [had] moved into the community,” undermining the business of local, neighborhood groceries. The 1956 city directory was the last that listed the Gloege Grocery, and Gloege family members were thereafter identified as working elsewhere. Louis and Margaret continued to live at 403 N. Hoback, but Louis spent his workdays as a steward at the Eagles Club.³⁹

Dorsey family members may have been among Gloege Grocery customers. Augustus and Carrie J. Dorsey remained nearby at 1002 E. Broadway until Augustus died, at about 83 years of age, in 1942. Bernice Dorsey continued his established pattern of moving between area cities. In 1942, when he registered for the draft, he was living in Anaconda. In 1950 and 1953, at least, he roomed with the Irvin-Donnell family in the family’s longtime Helena home at 212 S. Beattie (Site 24LC2431), and several years later he could be found renting a room at Helena’s YMCA.⁴⁰ He continued to work in this period—as a porter at Hand’s Barber and Beauty Shop, and a shoeshiner at Lee Leary and then at Guy’s Barber Shop—but he may have been in failing health. In 1960, Bernice Dorsey died in Spokane.⁴¹

Bernice Dorsey’s death came just a few years after the grocery established by his uncle Walter and aunt Almira closed its doors for good. Louis Gloege continued to own the property and occupy the residence, with the store building subsequently used as a “paint contractor’s warehouse for about four years” before becoming the Wise Penny Consignment Store. Gloege still owned the property when he died, and in 1975, current owner Robert Clarkson, acquired it from his estate. Thereafter, the Wise Penny operated for years in the store component of the building—run first by founders Ms. Kellner and Ms. George before being taken over by Gerda Anderson. It closed after Gerda Anderson’s death in 2002.⁴²

According to Sanborn Maps, the footprint of the main building at 401 N Hoback/900 8th Avenue has not been modified since before 1930 (or likely since being brought to the site). The building has, however, been modified in other ways. In 1974 “the building was partially remodeled and upgraded for the media assignment and portrait photography studio, business and retail store selling Magic Items and Theatrical Make-up” (with the “old carriage house, or small barn, in back of the building, used for storage of the Magic Show’s Illusions”). In the late 1970s, the second-generation asbestos siding was removed and metal siding applied over the original wood.

Various other upgrades, to wiring, heating, roofing, etc. were completed in the years that followed. Then in 2002-2003, “the house was vacated” and the residence portion of the building renovated. The “house became the Sleepy Senator . . . operating as a Bed and Breakfast Suite.”⁴³ It continues to be used as a vacation rental.

The outbuildings have also been modified over the years. The shed along the east property line was removed sometime after the 1950s. So, too, was the west-end addition to the west component of the garage, which restored the garage to the footprint it had on the 1930 Sanborn Map of the Dorsey Grocery and Residence.⁴⁴
